THE STUDY

Fashion encompasses all areas of life. Clothing represents an emblematic area of fashion development. With the replacement of classic fashion mechanisms, fashion today appears in an almost unmanageable complexity and diversity. Both nationally and internationally, a multitude of partly contradictory fashion trends and concepts with the most diverse organisational structures and market strategies exist in parallel. In addition to the classic proximity to industry, media and marketing, there are interfaces to other design disciplines, as well as to science and the fine arts.

With numerous theoretical art and cultural studies seminars and department-specific workshops, students are prepared for a wide variety of working areas in fashion. With a view to internationality and the exciting dynamics of fashion, the development of a creative identity is a focal point of the artistically orientated course. Berlin has now established itself as a fashion city, partly because young designers in particular like to settle here. Quite a few of them are graduates of the weißensee academy of art berlin. In recent years, students from the department have participated in international competitions with great success.

The Bachelor's degree programme aims to enable students to develop their own creative position and design identity in the field of fashion design. The degree programme is characterised by an intensive interaction between practical design work and theoretical analysis. In addition to practical training, the programme trains the ability to approach complex design tasks methodically and solve them independently. Project-orientated teaching takes centre stage.

In the first year of the four-year Bachelor's degree programme, artistic and design fundamentals are taught in an interdisciplinary manner together with students from other degree programmes at the art academy. The following three years are organised on a project-oriented basis. The project topics on offer form the framework for students to develop their own questions. T he interdisciplinary exchange with the other departments is promoted by the close proximity and a corresponding range of projects.

Foundation Course (first year of studies)

The foundation year are completed by students from all degree courses together in mixed groups and are one of the special features that define the profile of the weißensee academy of art berlin and, in addition to elementary artistic knowledge, are intended to enable communicative action that goes beyond the individual degree course. Students can test sensual-immediate and analytical-systematic working methods in a practical comparison and reflect on them theoretically. The central subject is the teaching of the fundamentals of art and design. In addition to the necessary technical skills, creative and artistic processes are experienced from as many different perspectives as possible in lively practice. Basic courses: Drawing, Visual Artistic Design, Spatial and Plastic Design, Digital Media, Anatomy/Morphology and Photography.

Program structure / course of study

The Fashion Design course is divided into a four- year Bachelor's and a two-year Master's course. After the two-semester joint foundation course, the 3rd semester introduces students to design and project work in fashion design. This is a project course with extensive specialist content. The semester is divided into three weekly teaching and learning units: Practical projects are carried out two days a week. Theoretical lectures and seminars are held on two other days. One day a week is set aside for nature study, illustration and accompanying subjects. Throughout the course, students also receive extensive tuition in classical and computer- guided editing. The projects in the second year of study serve to teach students how to find forms and how to consistently develop them into concrete designs. The focus is on the examination of form and silhouette as well as the sensitive handling of proportion and color and the learning of a technical language. In addition, basic skills and knowledge of fashion design are learned and trained.

In the 2nd study phase, students generally work on a practical design project that aims to develop their sense of form, a sensitive approach to proportions and materials as well as a serial collection design. In addition, there are short-term projects, which should enable students to work independently on tasks in a short period of time. The Bachelor's examination concludes with the presentation of the Bachelor's examination concludes with the presentation of the final design project/Bachelor's thesis. The final project includes the design of an extensive, independent collection, in which the individual style conception is in the foreground. Students also have the opportunity to carry out extensive research; they can deal with current developments or technologies and focus on material finishing or surface design.

Studio Workshops

In addition to the individual departments, the 19 excellently equipped workshops and studios offer training in the craft of printing, casting, weaving and knitting techniques as well as in solid digital technologies. The academy's research laboratories focus on experimental research and networks on sustainable design strategies and media and information technologies. In the workshops, artists and designers can try out artistic and creative designs on models or objects. In the workshops, artists and designers can try out artistic and creative designs on models or objects. The workshops provide an introduction to basic craft skills and have the material equipment for the most important techniques. There is a bookbindery, a screen printing, gravure printing and lithography workshop, an Elab for interactive technologies, a wood, ceramics and metal workshop, a model making workshop, a metal welding workshop and a photography workshop. The academy also has its own library, a equipment rental and a computer studio with a wide range of printing facilities.

Theory and history

„Theory and History“ is compulsory for all students from the first semester onwards. The aim is to be able to recognize the difference between academy-based learning and independent study right from the start. For this reason, almost all courses in the BA programs are compulsory elective courses for the entire duration of the study. Basic historical and theoretical knowledge is taught in the first study phase. During this study phase, the course „Introduction to Academic Work“ is compulsory once. In the second study phase, courses are offered for advanced students that deal with more specific topics and thus impart more detailed and in-depth knowledge. When choosing courses, students should not only consider their future career choice, but also the possibility of acquiring comprehensive knowledge.

Practical orientation

Practical relevance is an essential element of many project offerings in the main study period. To this end, cooperation projects are offered in which real-life tasks are worked on. During the program, students can also complete an internship in the 6th or 7th semester as an elective. In this internship, students perform job-related tasks in design-oriented companies, agencies, or offices. The internship is intended to give students an overview of possible activities and prepare them for their future field of work.

Study abroad

The weißensee academy of art and design berlin has an intensive student exchange program with more than 120 partner universities and academies in Europe, Asia, the USA and Canada. We recommend that students spend a semester abroad. This allows them to expand their professional skills in a different teaching and learning culture. They also prepare themselves for an increasingly international job market. Students in the second stage of their studies can find out about exchange places on the ERASMUS program or other opportunities to study abroad at the International Office of weißensee academy of art,.

Master's program

Graduates who have successfully completed their bachelor's degree have the opportunity to continue with a four-semester master's program. The MA program aims to further develop students' design identity and creative visions at the highest level. Based on sound knowledge of fashion design, students gain a comprehensive understanding of the global fashion market. The focus is on project-oriented teaching. In addition to classic fashion concepts, the master's program also develops projects from related fields and interdisciplinary work.

The application period for the master's design programs is from March 1 to April 30. Admission is only for the winter semester. Further information can be found at: www.kh-berlin.de under >Application >Study application >MA Design

Together with your application, you also upload your digital portfolio, which includes your artistic or design work. In the next section you will find further information on the application documents and portfolio submission.

The application deadline as well as the digital portfolio submission ends on Tuesday, January 5, 2027 at 12:00 noon (CET).

If you pass the portfolio examination, you will receive an invitation to the artistic entrance exam at the end of January, which is expected to take place between 15 and 19 February 2027. We will inform you of the exact date in the invitation letter in application portal (CMS)

General notes on portfolio creation

Apart from the number of approx. 20 artistic or creative works, no topics or forms are specified by the departments. The individual design of the portfolio is important.

In addition to your artistic aptitude and creativity, it should also reflect your interest in the desired department. A good selection of works is crucial, as the first task when applying for a place at art academy is to take a close look at your own artistic identity, talents and objectives. It is not the quantity that is important, but a consciously curated selection. Choose your strongest works that combine technical skill, creative concepts and diversity in medium and expression and show your creative depth. Artistic and creative work samples that demonstrate a certain continuity and intensity are very welcome.

More over, you can also include short texts, such as sketches or explanatory descriptions. In these, you explain the idea behind a work, a creative piece or a project, the steps you have taken, the questions you have pursued and the techniques you have used. In this way, you provide an insight into your creative process and show that you are critical of your working methods. In addition, drawings and sketchbooks are highly valued in all degree courses, as they are an important medium for visualizing and developing ideas and concepts.

Our student projects and works on the website and the tour in July can serve as inspiration. We also recommend that you actively seek feedback. Visit our portfolio consultations and information days! Creative people in your area can also support you.
