Study Program Visual Communication

and additional contract teachers
as well as artistic assistants

The programs in visual communication do not aim at specialization, but rather have general orientation. Students will learn to develop independent design positions in constantly changing fields of work. The foundation for this is a broad understanding of visual culture and its significance in society. Visual communication comprises a broad spectrum of media: printed media (for example, books and posters), interactive media (like websites, e-books, or interactive installations), three-dimensional media (like exhibitions or orientation systems), and performative media (like actions in public space).

Students learn how to critically question communicative tasks and contents, and to conceive and realize the answers resulting from such questioning in a design suitable for the given medium. The project-oriented program leads to an intense interchange between practical design work and theoretical engagement. Special attention is given to both design and theoretical approaches as foundations of visual communication.

Students learn to analyse problems and to conceptualise and implement the results of those analyses in a creative and media-oriented way. In this process, particular importance is given to the creative and theoretical foundations of visual communication. The course is distinguished by the intense interplay of practical design work and theoretical debate on the effects of visual and verbal communication.

During this study course, prospective designers learn to approach and solve complex design tasks methodically. This includes not only design skills but also linguistic and social ones. Designers in visual communication need to be able to explain their concepts and work in teams. They require a theoretical and historical background as a reference for their own design work. Students learn about work in the professional world during their work projects which include practical tasks often carried out with partners from outside the university. Graduates will have received a broad technical foundation which enables them to work in all areas of visual communication and react flexibly to future developments in their profession.

THE STUDY

Start of studies

Admission for first-year students only in the winter semester, with the start of beginning in October. For transfer students (from the 3rd semester onwards) are admitted for the admission is possible for the summer and winter semester.

Course structure

The entire program is modular in structure. modules and their contents are described in the Module Handbook (at www.kh-berlin.de under >Study >Study Organization >Study Regulations.

The course is divided into a four-year Bachelor course and a two-year Masters. The bachelor's program starts with an one-year interdisciplinary foundation course, attended by students across all departments.

After the foundation year the Bachelors course aim to produce competent and independent designer personalities. Teaching in the shape of exercises, seminars and lectures is largely done in common courses for all specialisms.

Foundation Course (first year of studies)

Students in all departments take the foundation courses in the foundation of art and design. General aesthetic, visual and practical foundational knowledge and practice are thought, including foundations in the fields of digital media and anatomy/morphology. Students are introduced to sensual-direct as well as analytical-systematic ways of working. The broad curriculum enables them to discover, develop, and deepen their individual abilities and talents.

Teaching takes place in interdisciplinary small working groups. Interdisciplinary interactions, teamwork, and communicative activity going beyond the limits of one own discipline and genre. With the special structure and its range of what is on offer, the foundational program is a specialty of weißensee academy of art. The program emphasizes in particular the following: teaching the foundation art and design, expanding individual creative abilities, open up new work modes, acquisition of expertise and skills in various crafts and more.

Study abroad

The weißensee kunsthochschule berlin has an intensive student exchange program with more than 120 partner universities, academies and colleges in Europe, Asia, USA and Canada. At the International Office of the weißensee kunsthochschule berlin, students in the second stage of their studies can obtain information about exchange places in the ERASMUS program or other opportunities for a stay abroad and submit their submit their applications

Studio Workshops

The instructional program of weißensee academy of art berlin is outstanding supported by its studios workshops. The 19 superbly equipped workshops and studios provide practical, technical training in printing, casting, weaving and knitting skills as well as in solid digital technologies. The artisans convey skills and basic knowledge about the most disparate materials. All students can use the workshops, whatever course they are enrolled. Besides acquiring traditional manual skills, they can learn the newest computer-aided techniques.

For example weißensee has a Ceramic- and Model Making Workshop, also a Wood-, Welding- and Bookbinding Workshop, a Printing Studio, a Silkscreen- and Gravure Workshop, Weaving/Dying/ Knitting rooms, Photography- and a Computer Studio, an Interactive Technology Lab and more. The research laboratories at the school focus on experimental research and networks for sustainable design strategies as well as media and information technologies.

Conclusion of study

The study is concluded with a Bachelor examination. Admission to the bachelor thesis procedure is only for students who have completed at least two semesters of main study and have concluded this study successfully. After having passed the bachelor examination, the graduate will receive the academic degree of „Bachelor of Arts in Visual Communication“.

Master Program

In the graduate program, students are given the opportunity to deepen their knowledge and skills, and to expand the design potential in the fields of social and cultural communication.
